

So, my name is Ben Rogers. I'm majoring in Business Administration with a concentration in management. And I also have two minors in Spanish and mathematics and post-graduation I intend to go into project management.

Honestly, I started with computer science but after, you know, close evaluation and meditation and focusing on what I really wanted to do and figuring out who I was, I really took my past and my strengths and my skills and combined them and this is what I got.

Ah, man. Absolutely. Like, my time here at Fayetteville State, there have been a plethora – from everyone from faculty to advisors to Deans, administrators – they've all been very helpful but especially since I've made the transition to this department. It's just been beautiful man, everyone from Dr. Brown to Dr. Jackson, Ms. Cogdell, Mr. McCrory, they've all been huge inspirations for me and they made sure I've been on the right track since I transitioned.

First of all, in order to bring someone here to Fayetteville State, I would have to let them know first of all, it's not a huge town because coming from Charlotte, it's a ridiculous culture shock. Ok, because Charlotte is a big city, there's so much going on there, it's anything you could want to do there from the good to the bad but here it's kind of the opposite. There aren't as many things to do here but there's enough, so if you want to make a positive impact on the community it's a lot easier here but it'll be whatever they make it so, if they want to come here and do all the right things they'll definitely have the resources to do so.

I'm proud to be a bronco simply because of the man I've become in my years here. Like when I came here I wouldn't say I was immature but I wasn't close to the level of maturity that I have now. And I don't know if I would be the man I am now if I didn't come to Fayetteville State.
