

I am Ransford Bellamy. Senior here at Fayetteville State University and I am a psychology major.

To be honest, I got accepted to Fayetteville State like July 23rd, so it was really, really late in the game. I didn't think about becoming a psychologist really until I want to say my sophomore year high school and it was because of my grandfather. He was a Navy vet and he had schizophrenia. And you know growing up I always wanted to learn more about you know how can I help people that's in his predicament.

Dr. Timothy Moore, he was my introduction to bio psychology professor I think he's the head of the department but Timothy Moore, man, he's been more than helpful like really when I took his class he would really break things down to me and he would even like tell me to come at the class to talk to him and stuff like that so I think he's a great mentor.

This is really like one of the premier HBCU's. I know it doesn't get his notoriety like it should but we have produced more than enough alumni that are very successful. You come here this is a family-oriented environment like your teachers actually know your name and not just a number in the room. You actually have that one-on-one time with your professors so that is key to a student's matriculation throughout college.

I'm proud to be a Bronco because you know it's just the embodiment of Bronco pride. You know it's Fayetteville State University. It is in little old Fayetteville, North Carolina, but to us it's big ole Fayetteville, North Carolina, so like I'm proud to be a Bronco because you know of the history and tradition that Fayetteville State has to offer and like I said earlier man 150 years of excellence.
