Fayetteville State University’s Doctor of Education in Leadership (Ed.D.) is designed for practicing and aspiring educational leaders who will, as 21st century facilitators of learning, become change agents in the cultural, economic, social, and educational development of North Carolina, US, and globally.

The Doctor of Education (Ed.D.) in Educational Leadership requires sixty (60) semester hours of graduate course credits. We offer an accelerated, cohort-based, flexible, and student-centered program that allows varied course options and modes of delivery.

The Doctor of Education (Ed.D.) Program in Educational Leadership is now accepting application for the 2015-2016 academic year.
