Foreign Language Laboratory
Fayetteville State University

March 2006

A number of screen buttons, menus and controls are active and can be used by the student. The screen buttons are each associated with a function key. Pressing the function key or clicking on the screen button with the mouse "presses" the button.

The student screen contains the following controls:

This button plays the students recording from the beginning. This function may also be accessed from the menu bar by choosing Play or by pressing the function key F2 on the keyboard.

This button starts recording the student's voice. Any previous recording is replaced by the new recording.

This function may be also accessed by pressing the function key F3 on the keyboard or from the menu bar by choosing Record and New. If it is desired to continue a recording from where it left off, this may be accomplished by selecting Record and Continue from the menu bar.

Pressing this button in the middle of playing or recording suspends the play or record. Pressing the button again resumes. This function may also be accessed from the menu bar by choosing Pause or by pressing F4 on the keyboard.

Pressing this button plays the sound recorded for the item in the lesson. In example items this plays the example sound that the student is to emulate. Pressing F5 on the keyboard will also play this audio clip.

This button (or function key F6 on the keyboard) plays the sound recorded for the instructions that apply to a section of a lesson. If special instructions have been given to the student for an item these are played instead.

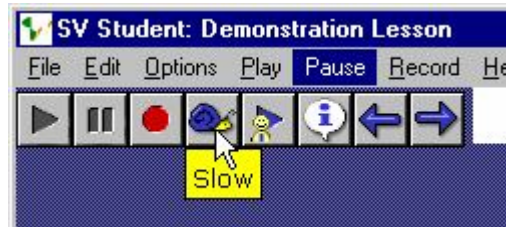

Pressing this button causes all recordings to be played slower. The sounds do not change in pitch. Pressing the button again returns to normal speed playback. Pressing F7 on the keyboard will perform the same function.

Pressing this button (or F8 on the keyboard) terminates an item and displays the item menu. When the item menu is already displayed, this button selects the next item in sequence.

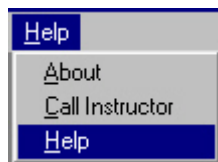

This ends the student's session in this lesson. Control returns to the course menu selection system. Function key F9 performs the same function.

At anytime if the cursor is held over the button the function of that button will appear below after a short delay.

If a button function is not available for a certain screen, it will be displayed grayed out.

This help manual is available at anytime but selecting Help from the menu bar.
