

Student's Perceptions of Instructional Effectiveness

The Student's Perceptions of Instructional Effectiveness shall be administered by a student for each faculty member's courses each semester. The Teaching and Learning Center shall tally, summarize and report back to the faculty (percent of student selecting each response item) the forced choice items of the instrument for each course. The faculty shall summarize the open ended questions of the instrument for each of their courses. The faculty shall include in their portfolio (part of their annual report) a summary and an assessment of their teaching performances. The faculty shall highlight; (1) what students liked best about their courses, (2) where improvement can be made in their instructional effectiveness and (3) how these improvements are implemented.

Student Perception of Course Delivery Effectiveness

The faculty, staff, and administrators of Fayetteville State University are committed to providing students the highest quality education available. Toward that end, we seek to maximize the effectiveness of classroom experiences. Your faculty members seek honest, considered feedback from their students in order to aid in their development as educators. This instrument is designed for students to provide feedback to faculty on the effectiveness of many aspects of the instruction provided by the faculty. It is crucial that students who complete this instrument know that their feedback will be anonymous, and will be taken very seriously. To that end, we ask students to be completely honest in their responses, and to take their time with this endeavor in order to provide thoughtful comments to their faculty. For the questions on the next page, please consider for each question whether the attribute in the question was effective in aiding your learning and growth in this course, and to what degree.
