12-Hour Policy

Students may enroll in graduate courses prior to admission to a graduate degree program; however, any hours over the twelve (12) semester hour limit taken prior to admission by the Dean of The Graduate School will not be used to fulfill requirements for a graduate degree.

Exceeding the 12-Hour Limit

I am hereby advised that twelve (12) semester hours of graduate credit earned at Fayetteville State University prior to admission to a graduate degree program are the maximum number of hours which can be counted toward a Master's degree at Fayetteville State University. I am choosing to take more than twelve (12) semester hours with the clear understanding that these hours will not count toward a graduate degree at Fayetteville State University.
