BroncoSTAR
Supporting Transition and Retention

BroncoSTAR is coming to FSU and it is time for faculty to gear up! BroncoSTAR provides targeted support to students with learning differences and faculty who want to introduce Universal Design for Learning (UDL) in their classrooms.

Universal Design for Learning
Learning Communities of Practice

UDL is an innovative pedagogical model that focuses on providing students with course content in more than one way (multiple means of representation), giving students options for demonstrating what they have learned (multiple means of expression) and using a variety of techniques to encourage active learning (multiple means of engagement). Faculty who are interested in experimenting with UDL should consider joining a BroncoSTAR learning community. With the support of the BroncoSTAR team, faculty in learning communities will be given the personal and technological support they need to re-design a course using the principles of UDL.

Don’t Miss Out!

BroncoSTAR and the Office of Faculty Development are thrilled to bring Dr. Barbara Levin, an expert in UDL, to our campus! Be sure not to miss out on this amazing opportunity to learn more about UDL and the faculty development opportunities that BroncoSTAR has to offer!
